Tatshenshini River System

- DAY 1
The first day is reserved for travel and orientation. We will meet at the Hotel Halsingland at 4:00 PM to hand out river bags, review the gear list and answer questions. The rest of the afternoon will be yours to explore our beautiful northern town. If your schedule permits feel free to arrive a day or so early, as there is much to explore in and around Haines. We will have hotel accommodations arranged for the first night of your trip.
- DAY 2
Our put-in is located at Dalton Post, Yukon Territory, 110 scenic miles from Haines. The drive up the Haines Highway takes us through the Chilkat Bald Eagle Preserve before ascending out of the coastal valley and into the alpine region. Wildflowers, jagged mountain peaks and hanging glaciers set the scene as the headwaters of the Tat begin to form. The put-in is located near an outpost along the historic Dalton Trail and close to a First Nation's village of the Champagne-Aishihik people. After lunch and a short river talk we will begin our journey downstream, where a five-mile long gorge of class III-IV whitewater awaits us. The river then slows as it meanders through the thick, forested valley.
- DAYS 3-6
The river picks up pace as it increases exponentially in volume from the many tributaries pouring into it. The valley floor also opens up, creating an array of braided river channels and unobstructed wildlife viewing.
- DAYS 7-10
As we approach the confluence of the Tatshenshini and the Alsek rivers, keep scanning the land for mountain goats peering down from a rocky precipice or bears ambling along the riverbanks looking for food. The scenery perpetually inspires the soul as the river, mountains and space continue to become larger and larger. We will have the opportunity to camp at the base of, and possibly walk on the Walker Glacier. Nearing the conclusion of the trip it is easy to think that the experience couldn't get any better. But wait! The grand finale of Alsek Lake and its unequivocal beauty lies ahead. We will spend our last days here below the towering 15,000-foot Mt. Fairweather and amongst building-sized icebergs. The last morning we give our farewells to Alsek Lake and float down to Dry Bay, where our chartered flight will shuttle us to Yakutat. Our trip officially ends here, but the memories will last forever!

Life On The River

The Alaskan wilderness is a vast and varied part of the world with inherent characteristics that you will need to understand before setting out on an extended trip. Safety is of primary concern in these remote regions, as is environmental preservation. Our guides are very experienced in these areas and it is important that you pay attention to the pre-trip safety briefing, as well as advice they may offer throughout the trip.

These time tested tips make our trips run safely and smoothly, please read them carefully. We will review these matters before putting on the river, so please ask for clarification if there is anything you do not understand.

Medical Needs – Please be up front about any medical needs and discuss special medical concerns with the trip leader.

At the Put-in – Be patient with us the first day as we stow everything on the rafts. Choose a guide to ride with for the day and present them with your two dry bags. The last items loaded onto the rafts will be your daypack.

Arriving to Camp – When we arrive at camp the Trip Leader will lay out the camp scene with specific spots for tents, kitchen and toilet facility. Everyone then forms a fire line to help ease the unloading of all the group camping and personal bags. We carry the group gear to the kitchen area then choose a tent site and relax!

Choosing a Campsite – Find a tent site near camp, not too close to the cooking area but not too far away. Avoid obvious game trails, leaving a wildlife corridor open. Try not to destroy vegetation in tent placement, use existing tent spots when available. Also try to use existing trails as you move about camp to minimize impacts.

Tents – Winds can pick up unexpectedly! As you put up your tent use the heavy tent stakes that we supply. Please don't dig a trench around your tent. In the morning, it is a good idea to dry out your tent, but be sure to keep it staked down while drying so it doesn't blow away.

Human Waste – Liquids go into the river and solids go into the portable toilet facility. A private latrine area will be provided. Wash your hands at the hand wash system afterwards. Cleanliness is very important.

Bears – Keep the camp area clean. Pick it up and dispose of any food dropped regardless of how small. If you want to go for a walk, discuss it with a guide first; don't go away from the camp by yourself, hike in groups of at least four people and make noise on hikes, especially in dense brush. If you spot a bear, notify a guide immediately and gather everyone together. In camp, bring any personal food to the kitchen at night for us to store away. Do not have food in or near your tent!

Firewood – Gathering firewood is one of the required camp chores. Please collect only down and dead wood that is the thickness of a wrist or smaller.

Meals – By the end of a long day on the river we all get a little hungry. A table for snacks will be set up as soon as possible and we ask that you don't hover in the kitchen while we are cooking. Once meals are called please wash your hands and proceed to the line.

Dishes – We have a five-bucket dish washing system; organic waste goes in the first bucket, then a warm pre-wash, a hot wash, a hot rinse and a sanitizer. After washing, put your plate, bowls and cups in the dish drying net under the table and leave your utensils in the sanitizing bucket. We welcome your help with cleaning the group dishes.

Garbage – It is essential that everyone understand the need to pick up any items that may fall on the ground. We burn paper garbage, collect metals and aluminum cans and save all other garbage in a collection system of bags.

Mornings – If you are an early riser, you are welcome to quietly get the morning fire going and put the coffee water on. Do check your watch to see what time it is though as the sun sometimes rises at 3:00 AM. Coffee call is a wake up call, come get a warm drink and then go back to start packing your personal gear. Breakfast call will follow. The guides will begin breaking down the community camp, at which time you should finish packing your bags and tent. Once rafts are loaded, choose a guide to ride with and bring your personal gear.

On the River – It can't be stressed enough that dressing in layers is the secret to being comfortable on the river. Wear your light layers close to your body and have progressively warmer layers either on you or in your daypack. It is very difficult to get into your dry bag during the day, so keep your daypack handy with extra socks, clothes, raingear, etc. Store your camera and binoculars in a waterproof container when not in use. Both your daypack and ammo can, will be near you on the boat. We will keep your hiking boots in a dry bag that stays with the boat you are riding on that day.

Personal Hygiene – Hand washing before eating or assisting in food prep and after visiting the toilet facilities is essential as a bug can easily be passed throughout the group in a short time. The usual shower system is the bucket and bowl method. Water will be heated over the fire and poured into a five-gallon bucket. You can then take your bucket and bowl to a private area for an improvised shower/bath.

General Information –It is very important to stay well hydrated, so drink plenty of water. Don't forget to put on sunscreen, the long days and the reflection off the water can be very intense. When you take off your lifejacket, be sure to secure it from blowing away with the sudden winds. We keep a small library of books available for additional education, don't hesitate to ask for reading material.

Hiking – Hikes are lead regularly by guides and all are invited to come along. We ask that you please do not wander off on your own without first telling someone and preferably taking someone with you. Hiking trails should be used when available. Do not take shortcuts especially on switchbacks as this causes erosion. When in open areas without trails try to step on rocks or gravel and avoid moist or vegetated ground.

Wildlife – Wildlife viewing is one of the biggest draws to the outdoors, but careful attention is required to maintain the safety of both people and animals. It is important that we never feed any wild animal even squirrels or birds. Teaching wild animals to associate humans with food can endanger you and the animal.

Cultural Considerations – Native peoples and other explorers are known to have used many of the areas we travel through. It is important that we not disturb any artifacts or cultural sites we encounter.

Drinking Water – Hydration is key and it is easy to get behind on your fluid intake. Water is boiled or filtered while out on the river and is readily available.

Wind – Winds can pick up in a matter of seconds and un-skated tents or loose clothing items can be lost. Make sure to secure all belongings and gear before leaving unattended.

Relaxing – Breathe deeply to fill your lungs with the unpolluted air, notice the lack of extraneous sounds, marvel at the spectacular mountains and sky scenes, fall into the relaxing rhythm of the rolling river and finally, enjoy to the fullest every moment of this unique adventure of a lifetime.

Clothing & Equipment - Alsek

The remote and pristine wilderness we will be traveling through is in a temperate rainforest. Rain is an integral part of this unique region and weather can range from horizontal, driving rain to sunny and 75°. There is no reliable way to predict the weather; therefore it is crucial to prepare for all possibilities.

We strongly urge you to use synthetic, wool or fleece items because they remain warm when wet and they dry quickly. We also rely on a layering system, which means wearing light layers close to the body with warmer layers added as necessary. The gear you bring, as well as being physically and mentally prepared are directly related to your enjoyment of the trip.
