Alesek River Expeditions

In the northwest corner of North America the boundaries of Alaska, British Columbia and the Yukon Territory converge to form the largest protected landmass on earth. Amidst these glacier-filled ranges the Alesek and Tatshenshini Rivers flow from mountains to sea through one of the most spectacular wilderness areas on the planet. From the Yukon interior to the coast of Alaska, the Alesek River winds through breathtaking scenery, passing wildlife and glaciers on the way. Join us as we explore the biodiversity of this region from the vantage point of the river. It will be a trip you will never forget!

Based in Haines, Alaska, Chilkat Guides is the only local U.S. operator on the Alesek and Tatshenshini Rivers. After almost 30 years of running these expeditions, our local expertise combined with the vast international experience and safety record of our guides makes us the premier guide service on the Tatshenshini and Alesek rivers.

Your trip begins in the Yukon Territory and flows into British Columbia and eventually Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve. The journey reaches its crescendo at Alesek Lake, where the Grand Plateau and Alesek Glaciers descend from high above, carving through massive coastal mountains. Alesek Lake is a photographer's dream. We will row out among the lake and icebergs to see, hear and become a part of this landscape. The Alesek flows out of the dry Canadian interior in Haines Junction, Yukon Territory, to its confluence with the Tatshenshini just a few miles upstream of the U.S. Border. As the river carves its way through two of the world's most spectacular national parks, Kluane Park in Canada and Glacier Bay Park in Alaska, it roars through the formidable Turnback Canyon (which you will portage by helicopter). After the two rivers unite, the Alesek continues to slice through giant mountain ranges on its way to the Gulf of Alaska. This is a landscape that the ice ages have not forgotten; for decades adventurous travelers have joined us in this last true wilderness to escape into the vast beauty of nature unbounded. Join us!

Itinerary

DAY 0

We ask that you be in Haines, AK the day before your trip start date.

DAY 1

The first day of our Alsek trip is a travel day and all participants need to be in Haines the evening before. We will have a trip orientation where you will meet your guides and receive included and/or rental river gear. After the meeting there is time allotted to pack your dry bags and purchase any last minute items. On the afternoon of Day 1 we begin the 3-hour drive to the put-in camp near Haines Junction, Yukon Territory, Canada (don't forget your passport). We'll plan on camping at the put in for an early start the following morning.

DAYS 2-3

After a riverside breakfast and breaking camp, we launch rafts on the calm waters of the Dezadeash River, setting a mellow pace for the first few days of the trip. We gain some down-river momentum at the convergence of the swift-moving Kuskowalsh River. This confluence is the beginning of the Alsek River. From here we meander our way into an ice age wilderness, a sparse environment ripe with the scars of recent glacial activity.

DAYS 4-5

Now we begin nearing the glaciers. Along shore the exposed lava rocks become less common and are replaced by stratified sedimentary rocks. We also get our first taste of rapid waters here as the river drops into an iceberg-studded lake formed by the retreating Lowell Glacier. In the summer of 1997 this glacier surged forward at the amazing rate of one-quarter mile per week almost closing off the outflow of the river. We plan to have a layover day here for soaking up the scenery and hiking up Goatherd Mountain. The summit awards an incredible view of the Lowell Glacier as it reaches 40 miles into the mountains, its blue surface striped with curving lines of rock moraine.

DAYS 6-9

As we leave the Lowell Glacier behind, the river flows rapidly amongst ever-narrowing valley walls which display signs of powerful geologic forces at work. We will encounter the largest rapids of the trip here. The river continues at a swift pace, winding its way toward the Tweedsmuir Glacier. Here the glacier pushes the river against the adjacent mountain and creates the infamous Turnback Canyon, non-navigable to rafts. A helicopter will shuttle us and our gear over the turbulent waters, providing a spectacular aerial view of the glacier country and a peek at the seldom seen rapids of the canyon. After re-inflating the rafts we will continue down the river, passing the Vern Ritchie and Battle Glaciers. Not far downstream is the expansive confluence area of the Tatshenshini and Alsek Rivers.

DAYS 10-14

The total volume of water is now in the range of 50,000 to over 100,000 cubic feet per second (cfs), five times more water than the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon. The remote border cut between Canada and the U.S. will be visible just upstream from the fabulous Walker Glacier. This glacier is named for the fact that when conditions are right, visitors may actually be able to walk on the glacier surface. For the remainder of the trip we will be in a remote region of Glacier Bay National Park. Alsek Lake, the largest lake in the park, and some of the tallest mountains of the Coast Range provide a dramatic backdrop as we make camp and enjoy our final days. Our trip officially concludes in Dry Bay, a small but important seasonal fishing area on the Pacific coast. Here we will say goodbye to the guides and fly by small bush planes to Yakutat to meet up with scheduled jet service.

What's Included

Included in this expedition is transportation to the put-in, a bush flight at Dry Bay, all food on the river, a shared tent, sleeping bag and pad, life jacket, heavy-duty seam-sealed rubber rain gear, rubber boots with felt insoles, heavy-duty rubber gloves, two dry bags and an optional camera box (military ammo can).

River Expedition Frequently Asked Questions:

What kind of travelers go on river expeditions?

All age groups enjoy our expeditions! There are avid rafters who have been rafting for many years and then there are those who are experiencing rafting trips for the first time. Come with a group of friends or come alone and make new friends!

How would you rate the difficulty of the trip?

Rivers are classed on a scale of I – V. Class I is a float trip and Class V is big whitewater. Our expeditions are mostly Class II float trips with occasional Class IV rapids.

What watercraft do you use?

We use 18 foot inflatable rafts. Similar to large canoes, inflatable rafts are slower on the river but more suitable for traveling on rivers. These are the safest craft to use for this region. Four guests are carried in each raft oared by one experienced guide.

Who does the rowing?

There is one guide per raft and usually at least three rafts per expedition and the guides do the rowing. You are free to relax, take photos and soak in the scenery and wildlife! We always have paddles available for anyone who wishes to paddle.

How long are we on the river each day?

Each day varies, but when we are moving down river we'll typically spend about four to six hours in the rafts. Don't worry, we'll pull over for bathroom stops, breaks, hikes, lunches and just to stop and view the wildlife. Additionally, we'll schedule "lay-over" days where we won't be moving down-stream, rather just staying in one spot for two nights to allow for the incredible bigger hikes or bigger scenery experiences.

Where do we sleep?

All our expeditions are camping adventures that require you to sleep in tents. We provide you with a top quality, free standing expedition tent. These are based on double occupancy and if you would like a tent to yourself, please let us know as these are available to rent.

What should I bring?

You provide your personal gear and we provide the rest: top-quality tents, river gear, kitchen and camping equipment and bus/plane transportation. We've included a detailed equipment list with the items you are responsible for bringing as well as the items we have available for rent.

What do we eat?

We have three guidelines for our nutritious and delicious food selection: quality, quantity and variety. If you have special needs or desire a copy of our detailed menu descriptions, please let us know. With advanced notice, we can accommodate most special dietary requirements. Snacks and treats are provided but if you have any favorites feel free to bring some along.

What type of wildlife will we see?

Depending on what trip you are on, you may see different wildlife. You are more likely to see more bears on the Alsek and more moose on the Tat. Other wildlife you may see are Dall sheep, mountain goats, wolves, lynx, wolverine, ducks, geese, swans, eagles, falcons, hawks and salmon.

Are bears a concern?

By keeping our camp area clean we are able to keep unwanted visitors out of our camp site. We also set up our campsite in a way that leaves a “wildlife corridor” next to the river for wildlife that is passing through. When we go for hikes, we hike in groups of at least four people, and make noise – especially in areas of dense brush.

What about personal hygiene?

Hand washing before eating or assisting in food prep and after visiting the toilet facilities is essential. The usual shower system is the bucket and bowl method. Water will be heated over the fire and poured into a five-gallon bucket. You can then take your bucket and bowl to a private area for an improvised shower/bath.

Is there time for hiking?

There are some amazing hikes on our expeditions! Hikes are led regularly by guides and all are invited to come along. We will keep your hiking boots in a dry bag that stays with the boat you are riding on that day.

How hard is the trip and who can go?

It is difficult to quantify the difficulty or ease of any experience, but a few examples may be helpful. We have had people in their seventies as well as those as young as 12 years. We try to set the pace to accommodate a wide variety of ability levels. Attitude tends to be the main criterion, so come prepared to relax and enjoy the Great North.

What about bugs?

Populations of mosquitoes on the Alsek, Tatshenshini and Kongakut vary with temperature, rainfall and wind. As they are in semi-alpine or well drained areas, generally we try to choose campsites that have a slight breeze to be as “mosquito free” as possible. However, on occasion we may be unable to avoid them. In these situations, you will be glad to have mosquito repellent and a head net or bug jacket.

Life on the River:

The Alaskan wilderness is a vast and varied part of the world with inherent characteristics that you will need to understand before setting out on an extended trip. Safety is of primary concern in these remote regions, as is environmental preservation. Our guides are very experienced in these areas and it is important that you pay attention to the pre-trip safety briefing, as well as advice they may offer throughout the trip.

These time tested tips make our trips run safely and smoothly, please read them carefully. We will review these matters before putting on the river, so please ask for clarification if there is anything you do not understand.

Medical Needs – Please be up front about any medical needs and discuss special medical concerns with your trip leader.

At the Put-in – Be patient with us the first day as we stow everything on the rafts. Choose a guide to ride with for the day and present them with your two dry bags. Amongst the last items loaded onto the rafts will be your daypack.

Arriving to Camp – When we arrive at camp the Trip Leader will lay out the camp scene with specific spots for tents, kitchen and toilet facility. Everyone then forms a fire line to help ease the unloading of all the group camping and personal bags. We carry the group gear to the kitchen area then choose a tent site and relax!

Choosing a Campsite – Find a tent site near camp, not too close to the cooking area but not too far away. Avoid obvious game trails, leaving a wildlife corridor open. Try not to destroy vegetation in tent placement, use existing tent spots when available. Also try to use existing trails as you move about camp to minimize impacts.

Tents – Winds can pick up unexpectedly! As you put up your tent use the heavy tent stakes that we supply. Please don't dig a trench around your tent. In the morning, it is a good idea to dry out your tent, but be sure to keep it staked down while drying so it doesn't blow away.

Human Waste – Liquids go into the river and solids go into the portable toilet facility. A private latrine area will be provided. Wash your hands at the hand wash station afterwards. Cleanliness is very important.

Firewood – Gathering firewood is one of the required camp chores. Please collect only down and dead wood that is the thickness of a wrist or smaller.

Bears – Keep the camp area clean. Pick it up and dispose of any food dropped, regardless of how small. If you want to go for a walk, discuss it with a guide first; don't go away from the camp by yourself. Hike in groups of at least four people and make noise on hikes, especially in dense brush. If you spot a bear, notify a guide immediately and gather everyone together. In camp, bring any personal food to the kitchen at night for us to store away. Do not have food in or near your tent!

Meals – By the end of a long day on the river we all get a little hungry. A table for snacks will be set up as soon as possible and we ask that you don't hover in the kitchen while we are cooking. Once meals are called please wash your hands and proceed to the line.

Dishes – We have a five-bucket dish washing system; organic waste goes in the first bucket, then a warm pre-wash, a hot wash, a hot rinse and a sanitizer. After washing, put your plate, bowls and cups in the dish drying net under the table and leave your utensils in the sanitizing bucket. We welcome your help with cleaning the group dishes.

Garbage – It is essential that everyone understand the need to pick up any items that may fall on the ground. We burn paper garbage, collect metals and aluminum cans and save all other garbage in a collection system of bags.

Mornings – If you are an early riser, you are welcome to quietly get the morning fire going and put the coffee water on. Do check your watch to see what time it is though as the sun sometimes rises at 3:00 AM. Coffee call is a wakeup call, come get a warm drink and then go back to start packing your personal gear. Breakfast call will follow. The guides will begin breaking down the community camp, at which time you should finish packing your bags and tent. Once rafts are loaded, choose a guide to ride with and bring your personal gear.

Personal Hygiene – Hand washing before eating or assisting in food prep and after visiting the toilet facilities is essential as a bug can easily be passed throughout the group in a short time. The usual shower system is the bucket and bowl method. Water will be heated over the fire and poured into a five-gallon bucket. You can then take your bucket and bowl to a private area for an improvised shower/bath.

General Information – It is very important to stay well hydrated, so drink plenty of water. Don't forget to put on sunscreen, the long days and the reflection off the water can be very intense. When you take off your lifejacket, be sure to secure it from blowing away with the sudden winds. We keep a small library of books available for additional education, don't hesitate to ask for reading material.

Hiking– Hikes are led regularly by guides and all are invited to come along. We ask that you please do not wander off on your own without first telling someone and that you take someone with you. Hiking trails should be used when available. Do not take shortcuts especially on switchbacks as this causes erosion. When in open areas without trails, try to step on rocks or gravel and avoid moist or vegetated ground.

Wildlife – Wildlife viewing is one of the biggest draws to the outdoors, but careful attention is required to maintain the safety of both people and animals. It is important that we never feed any wild animal, even squirrels or birds. Teaching wild animals to associate humans with food can endanger you and the animal.

Cultural Considerations – Native peoples and other explorers are known to have used many of the areas we travel through. It is important that we not disturb any artifacts or cultural sites we encounter.

Wind – Winds can pick up in a matter of seconds and un-staked tents or loose clothing items can be lost. Make sure to secure all belongings and gear before leaving them unattended.

Relaxing – Breathe deeply to fill your lungs with the unpolluted air. Notice the lack of extraneous sounds. Marvel at the spectacular mountains and sky scenes. Fall into the relaxing rhythm of the rolling river and finally, enjoy to the fullest every moment of this unique adventure of a lifetime.

River Expedition Equipment List:

On the River

It can't be stressed enough that dressing in layers is the secret to being comfortable on the river. Wear your light layers close to your body and have progressively warmer layers either on you or in your daypack. We strongly urge you to use synthetic, wool or fleece items because they remain warm when wet and dry quickly. It is very difficult to get into your dry bag during the day, so keep your daypack handy with extra socks, clothes, raingear, etc. Store your camera and binoculars in a waterproof container when not in use. Both your daypack and ammo can will be near you on the boat.

The remote and pristine wilderness we will be traveling through is in a temperate rainforest. Rain is an integral part of this unique region and weather can range from horizontal, driving rain to sunny and 75° F. There is no reliable way to predict the weather, therefore it is crucial to prepare for all possibilities.
